

Seattle Post-Intelligencer

LIFE AND ARTS

SECTION E

Tuesday, November 6, 2007

HAIRLESS WONDERS

Who knew getting smooth could be so sweet?

BY ATHIMA CHANSANCHAI
P-I reporter

Waxing

With Jahn, at The Wax Bar, I went for more traditional treatments: brows, lips, and legs. This minimalist mod establishment sits between Pasta Bella and Tobacco Plus on 15th Avenue Northwest in Ballard, and while there are many waxing options in the city, this is the only one that has happy hour with reduced prices for brows and lips and a liquor license that lets it serve beer, including my favorite non-beer-tasting beverage, Lindemans Framboise Lambic. Yummy.

Jahn is pro. She's calm, friendly and informative every step of the way. And she specializes in 15-minute Brazilians.

"I don't know what would it take to shock me," said Jahn, who has also done

"Jahn is a pro. She's calm, friendly and informative every step of the way. And she specializes in 15 minute Brazilians."

Brazilians on men. "I'm so comfortable with it, it's like I'm talking to my best friend when I'm with a client."

Jahn's waxing ranges from $12 for "happy hour" brows to $65 for Brazilian and $40 or backs.

The Wax Bar also stays open until 9 p.m., giving women squeezed for time more options.

Wax Bar owner Karen Jahn gives Debbie Kamran an eyebrow wax. Jahn's Ballard shop is the only place in Seattle with happy-hour waxing special. Like a brew with brow wax?